

Kathryn M. Buder Center for American Indian Studies

GEORGE WARREN BROWN
SCHOOL OF SOCIAL WORK

Washington University Director of the Kathryn M. Buder Center for American Indian Studies

Washington University in St. Louis, Missouri invites applications and nominations for the position of Director of the Kathryn M. Buder Center for American Indian Studies in the George Warren Brown School of Social Work. The Buder Center is a leading center for comprehensive and interdisciplinary studies and practice to address issues of social concern to American Indians, their families and communities.

This position offers a unique opportunity for an individual to coordinate the Center's curriculum and program development and to work to recruit and support students. The director will act as a liaison to and develop productive relationships with American Indian communities and constituencies, both local and national. In addition, the successful candidate will pursue philanthropic opportunities to expand the Center's resources and scope of impact. This exciting opportunity is a senior staff position with the possibility of a non-tenure-track faculty appointment. The School seeks candidates with strong interest and experience in working with American Indian communities and issues.

Washington University has engaged the firm of Isaacson, Miller to assist in identifying and reviewing candidates for this position. Inquiries, nominations and applications may be directed in confidence to the search firm. Application materials should include: a letter describing the candidate's interest in and qualifications for the position and a current curriculum vitae. Electronic submissions are strongly preferred.

Please submit materials to:
Jamie Sands, Associate
Isaacson, Miller
334 Boylston Street, Boston, MA 02116
3692@imsearch.com

Washington University is an equal opportunity, affirmative action institution and encourages applications from and nominations of women and minority candidates.